

Statistics for the SDGs - global indicators

Unit percent [%] Available dimensions Research and development (R&D) is a creative work carried out on a systematic be in order to increase the stock of knowledge of man, culture and society, and the use this knowledge to devise new applications. It involves three types of activities, that is basic research, applied research (including industrial) and experimental development [ntramural expenditures on R&D include expenditures on R&D performed within statistical unit, whatever the source of funds. They involve both current and capital expenditures linked to R&D activities. Current expenditures on R&D include persor costs as well as costs of used materials, non-durable articles and energy, costs of external services (other than R&D) including external processing, transport, renove banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and property insurance, and equivalents for the benefit of employees — in a part in which relate to R&D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material an legal values that are used in research and development activities for more than one year. Gross domestic product (GDP) presents the final result of the activity of all entities the national economy. GDP is equal to the sum of gross value added generated by a national institutional units, increased by taxes on products and decreased by subsid on products. Gross domestic product is calculated according to obligatory in the	Name of the indicator	9.5.1 Gross domestic expenditures on R&D in relation to GDP
Sectors in all countries, in particular developing countries, including, by 2030, encouraging innovation and substantially increasing the number of research and development workers per 1 million people and public and private research and development spending Sum of internal expenditures on research and development activity incurred by all national entities conducting this activity, irrespective of origin of the funds, in relation GDP. Indicator is the main measure in research and development statistics, characterized the competitiveness and the level of knowledge economy. Unit percent [%] Available dimensions Research and development (R&D) is a creative work carried out on a systematic bin order to increase the stock of knowledge of man, culture and society, and the use this knowledge to devise new applications. It involves three types of activities, that is basic research, applied research (including industrial) and experimental development Intramural expenditures on R& D include expenditures on R& D performed within statistical unit, whatever the source of funds. They involve both current and capital expenditures linked to R&D activities. Current expenditures on R& D include expenditures on R& D including external processing, transport, renove banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and including, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and relate to R& D. Capital expenditures on R& D include expenditures on new fixed as linked to R& D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material and legal values t		'Goal 9. Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure'
Definition	Target	sectors in all countries, in particular developing countries, including, by 2030, encouraging innovation and substantially increasing the number of research and development workers per 1 million people and public and private research and
Research and development (R&D) is a creative work carried out on a systematic be in order to increase the stock of knowledge of man, culture and society, and the use this knowledge to devise new applications. It involves three types of activities, that is basic research, applied research (including industrial) and experimental development. Intramural expenditures on R& D include expenditures on R& D performed within statistical unit, whatever the source of funds. They involve both current and capital expenditures linked to R& D activities. Current expenditures on R& D include persor costs as well as costs of used materials, non-durable articles and energy, costs of external services (other than R& D) including external processing, transport, renove banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and property insurance, and equivalents for the benefit of employees – in a part in which relate to R& D. Capital expenditures on R& D include expenditures on new fixed as linked to R& D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material an legal values that are used in research and development activities for more than one year. Gross domestic product (GDP) presents the final result of the activity of all entities the national economy. GDP is equal to the sum of gross value added generated by a national institutional units, increased by taxes on products and decreased by subsidion products. Gross domestic product is calculated according to obligatory in the European Union countries principles of the European System of National and Regio Accounts (ESA 2010) and recommendations of the Eurostat.	Definition	national entities conducting this activity, irrespective of origin of the funds, in relation to GDP.Indicator is the main measure in research and development statistics,
Research and development (R&D) is a creative work carried out on a systematic be in order to increase the stock of knowledge of man, culture and society, and the use this knowledge to devise new applications. It involves three types of activities, that is basic research, applied research (including industrial) and experimental development intramural expenditures on R&D include expenditures on R&D performed within statistical unit, whatever the source of funds. They involve both current and capital expenditures linked to R&D activities. Current expenditures on R&D include persor costs as well as costs of used materials, non-durable articles and energy, costs of external services (other than R&D) including external processing, transport, renove banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and property insurance, and equivalents for the benefit of employees – in a part in which relate to R&D. Capital expenditures on R&D include expenditures on new fixed as linked to R&D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material an legal values that are used in research and development activities for more than one year. Gross domestic product (GDP) presents the final result of the activity of all entities the national economy. GDP is equal to the sum of gross value added generated by a national institutional units, increased by taxes on products and decreased by subsidion products. Gross domestic product is calculated according to obligatory in the European Union countries principles of the European System of National and Region Accounts (ESA 2010) and recommendations of the European of the European Union countries principles of the European S	Unit	percent [%] in order to increase the stock of knowledge of man, culture and society, and the use this knowledge to devise new applications. It involves three types of activities, that is basic research, applied research (including industrial) and experimental developmer Intramural expenditures on R& D include expenditures on R& D performed within statistical unit, whatever the source of funds. They involve both current and capital expenditures linked to R& D activities. Current expenditures on R& D include persor costs as well as costs of used materials, non-durable articles and energy, costs of external services (other than R& D) including external processing, transport, renove banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and ot current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and pr property insurance, and equivalents for the benefit of employees – in a part in which relate to R& D. Capital expenditures on R& D include expenditures on new fixed as linked to R& D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material and legal values that are used in research and development activities for more than one year. Gross domestic product (GDP) presents the final result of the activity of all entities the national economy. GDP is equal to the sum of gross value added generated by a national institutional units, increased by taxes on products and decreased by subsidion products. Gross domestic product is calculated according to obligatory in the European Union countries principles of the European System of National and Regio Accounts (ESA 2010) and recommendations of the Eurostat.	Available dimensions	total explanations	expenditures linked to R& D activities. Current expenditures on R& D include personnel costs as well as costs of used materials, non-durable articles and energy, costs of external services (other than R& D) including external processing, transport, renovation, banking, postal, ICT, publishing or municipal services, costs of business trips and other current costs including, in particular, taxes and fees charging costs of activity and profits, property insurance, and equivalents for the benefit of employees – in a part in which they relate to R& D. Capital expenditures on R& D include expenditures on new fixed assets linked to R& D and, since 2016, costs of computer hardware used in reasearch and development activities for more than one year (charges for using the product of intellectual property by another entity as well as expenditures on software developed on one's own), costs of purchased patents, long-term licenses or other non-material and legal values that are used in research and development activities for more than one year. Gross domestic product (GDP) presents the final result of the activity of all entities of the national economy. GDP is equal to the sum of gross value added generated by all national institutional units, increased by taxes on products and decreased by subsidies on products. Gross domestic product is calculated according to obligatory in the European Union countries principles of the European System of National and Regional Accounts (ESA 2010) and recommendations of the Eurostat.
Data availability Annual data; since 2010.
		Annual data; since 2010.
Notes	Notes
Data updated on 11-02-2025	Data updated on	11-02-2025
Metadata updated on 15-03-2022	Metadata updated on	15-03-2022